Teachers, are you looking for a fun enrichment opportunity this summer? Earn professional development hours while enjoying two engaging mornings of all-new content on federal courts!

Meet a judge, hear from fascinating guest speakers, and participate in fun interactive activities. Learn about the Federal Courts' newest educational initiative, Federal Courts 101. Investigate and evaluate news and media source coverage of the federal courts and learn how to bring information literacy into your classroom. Gain practical knowledge of the federal court system and leave the event with new ideas for classroom activities, lesson plans, and a myriad of useful resources!

The virtual workshop is designed for middle school and high school social studies teachers and is appropriate for both government and history courses. Space is limited – register early to reserve a seat!

FEATURING:

The Hon. Tanya Walton Pratt, Chief Judge,
U.S. District Court
Southern District of Indiana
